CASE GOES TO JURY

(Concluded from First Page)

seat in the court room was occupied and the aisle crowded. Everyone was on the tip toe of expectancy, and when District Attorney Moore arose to address the jury, the silence of a tomb prevailed.
The long struggle was nearing an end and the final effort to be put forth by counsel on each side would be the greatest in their lives.

District Attorney Moore called the attention of the jury to the solemn duty they had to perform; the necessity of dispassionately reviewing the testimony.
He then went over briefly the testimony of each witness, carefully bringing out the salient points of the evidence. He was followed by Attorney Smith. This is the first time Mr. Smith has addressed a jury, and in his effort he covered himself with glory. His plea was reasonable, conservative and to the point. He dissected the evidence witness by witness, bringing out the salient points with force and telling effect. It was an able effort and merited the congratulation given him.

He was followed by Attorney Noland.
Never was he in better form. He is recognized as one of the ablest attorneys in the state and this reputation is well deserved.

Mr. Noland for nearly an hour held the close attention of the jury as he went over the case point by point, advancing very ably the theory of the defense, that Johnson inflicted the injury on himself. Following Mr. Noland, Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Stone made the closing argument for the state.

In his talk to the jury Mr. Stone insisted that the state proved conclusively that Corpron was guilty of inflicting the injury that caused Johnson's death. He dwelt particularly on the statement made to Mrs. Johnson and Mr. Hixon and backed it up with the corroborative testimony of the state's witnesses. He held the close attention of the jury from beginning to end. His address was a masterful effort and reflected much credit on him as a lawyer and orator.

Following the close of Mr. Stone's remarks the jury was excused to admit of the arguments on the instructions to be given the jury. The defense asked, and the state approved, that the jury give not the same weight to Johnson's statement that it would give to the testimony of a witness on the stand.

It is quite likely that the jury will return a verdict this evening.

LETTER FROM MAYOR

the government officials work out some definite plan of action and make the people a proposition of some kind. It is my belief that many are in favor of irrigation by the government, and it would seem that some plan could be devised satisfactory to our citizens.

The city council sits on the first Mondays of each month, and I would be pleased to receive any committee who might wish to favor us with their presence, and should anything develop of sufficient importance to the general public to justify, I would be glad to call a special meeting of the council to confer with you. Yours Respectfully,

B. St. Geo. Bishop.
